

Daphne Magnuson Vice President of Strategic Communications

Daphne Magnuson is Vice President of Strategic Communications for the Natural Gas Supply Association (NGSA) and the Center for Liquefied Natural Gas (CLNG).

Daphne builds and manages NGSA's and CLNG's reputations as a global media voice and leader on natural gas and liquefied natural gas (LNG) industries and policies. She oversees daily operations, including media relations, media planning and outreach, event planning and organization, executive communications, speaking engagements and content creation.

She leads the team in producing and presenting NGSA's annual Winter Outlook, which has earned the reputation as an accurate and objective forecast for the natural gas market and has cemented the association's standing as the go-to resource for policymakers, customers and media.

Daphne has been indispensable in NGSA and CLNG's efforts to advocate for producers, shippers and marketers in major infrastructure, Natural Gas Act and environmental market proceedings with Congress, FERC commissioners and staff, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission and the National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissioners.

Before joining NGSA, she worked for the Electric Power Supply Association as vice president of public affairs and was senior director for public relations and communications at the American Gas Association. In her pre-energy career, she worked for Congress, campaigns and the media, including ABC News, where she was the publicist for the shows This Week With David Brinkley, ABC World News Saturday, ABC World News Sunday and Business World.

Daphne earned a Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Virginia.
